

Rock 'n' Roll Babies Onesies and T-shirts

Most girls and boys in the under-6 crowd are big fans of Mom and Dad. Now they can wear organic cotton onesies and T-shirts sporting an “I ♥ Mom” (or Dad) tattoo design. It’s playful designs like these that have made Rock ‘n’ Roll Babies a hit with eco-minded parents.

San Francisco-based artists Kris Bhat and Debbie Hartung started the company in 2007 when they were looking for baby gifts for friends. “We found a lot of cool, funky clothes for older kids and adults, but not for small kids,” says Bhat. “A lot of urban parents are looking for something colorful that’s organic as well.” Rock ‘n’ Roll Babies uses vegetable-based or low-impact dyes on clothes. When kids grow out of these outfits, parents get discounts on new clothes if they send the old ones back for Rock ‘n’ Roll to donate to a women’s shelter.—C.W.

What is “upcycling”?

“With upcycling, you value all aspects of the item and don’t treat any aspect as waste. So, for example, we have yogurt cups we’re making into gardening tools. We say, Let’s not melt it down, but give it a new use.”

Amazing

Yes, we’re supposed to consume this. Consider who made this Food from America. A ray of micronutrients your body digests and is ingesting Grass co-factors. It is made of dehydrated with cereal grains and energy-boosting ingredients into a smoothie flavor (Bert swears by the sole form. One serving is equal to about